SHRIMP

VANNAMEI SHRIMP

- Scientific Name: Litopenaeus vannamei
- Originated in the East Pacific Ocean it is seen much in Central and South America (from Sonora State of Mexico to North of Peru), in the seas with warm water (about 20°C) the year round.
 - Vannamei culture has been expanding quickly in 1970s, and today in some countries it even replaces Black Tiger species (Thailand, China, Viet Nam, ...).
- Farming techniques:
 - 1/ Intensive farming, super-intensive farming model
 - Number of crops: raise 2 crops a year (for super-intensive farming model, grow 3-4 crops/year). Remainder of the year focuses on improving ponds.
 - Stocking time:
 - + Season I: from January to July
 - + Season II: from November to December
 - 2/ Improved extensive farming model:
 - Number of crops: raise 2 crops per year, however, it is necessary to have 15-30 days of drying period between 2 crops.
 - Stocking time:
 - + Season I: from January to July
 - + Season II: from November to December
 - 3/ Extensive farming model:
 - Number of crops: all year round, but pond restoration should be carried out throughout the year by dredging ponds (from August to October).
 - Stocking time: From the beginning of January to the end of July, then start to stock again from November to the end of December.

BLACK TIGER SHRIMP

- Scientific Name: Peneaus Monodon
- Natural distribution ranges from South East Asia to the eastern coast of Africa.
- Available all year round; Vietnam's large harvest is in April.
- As the shrimp-farming industry has grown robustly, human has actively intervened in shrimp breeding, instead of relying heavily on natural breeding.
- Advanced intensive shrimp farming techniques have helped increase shrimp density per hectare.
